Our organisations strive to deliver high-quality services to the people of NSW. To do this, they need to attract and recruit top talent and ensure that organisational structures are effectively designed to achieve stated strategies and missions.

Mission, vision and strategy

Employees in the public sector should understand how their role fits into their organisation's overall mission, vision and strategy. Understanding their role in the context of the wider organisation will enable every employee to know how their individual contribution adds value in the overall mission of delivering for our customers. This in turn, will increase employee engagement.

Governance, risk and innovation

To ensure we deliver the highest quality services, our approach to governance, risk and innovation is critical.

- Governance encompasses the rules, processes and systems by which an organisation is controlled and operates. Broadly, it includes decision-making, responsibility, engagement and accountability for both the organisation as a whole and individuals. Accountability is one of the four core NSW public sector values.
- Risk implies the potential for uncertainty or deviation from expected outcomes. While risk is often seen as a negative, it can strategically provide opportunities for an organisation.
- Innovation in the public sector context means creating new and better products, processes, services, and technologies to improve outcomes for the people of NSW. A healthy risk appetite can help promote innovation as does diversity and inclusive work practices.

Recruitment

Recruitment is the process of attracting, screening and onboarding people. It is a high-volume activity for the sector, which is the largest employer in Australia. In 2022, there were over 40,000 roles advertised across the sector, an increase of 39.4% from 2021.

Growing the sector's capabilities means recruiting the right people. Time to hire has decreased each year since 2017 and is now at a record low of 34.4 days.

Mobility

Exploring new employment opportunities is an exciting part of the I work for NSW employee value proposition. Having a mobile workforce makes it easier to redeploy resources to match priorities and respond effectively to change and emerging trends. It is an effective way to get the right person into the right job quickly, and to infuse innovative ideas and practices into a workplace.

Employee mobility is also widely regarded as one of the best ways to develop leadership capability, provide enriching careers, and build and retain capability and know-how.

Digital and customer service

A key measure of the performance of the NSW public sector is customer satisfaction. The various parts of the sector share a common goal – delivering services that make NSW a great place to live, work, visit and invest in. We want our services to be easy to use, high quality and accessible to all.

The annual State of the Customer report details work towards the NSW government’s goal of delivering easy, effective and trustworthy government services. The scores below indicate the ease, satisfaction and trust that individual customers have with NSW Government services.

Collaboration

The 14 Premier’s Priorities cannot be achieved by a single agency operating in isolation. Delivering for the people of NSW requires agencies to work together and share knowledge internally and with other sectors.

Well-executed collaboration enables agencies to also share ideas, resources, skills, networks and assets, leading to better outcomes for our customers. Across the sector, employee perceptions of teamwork and collaboration within and across organisations declined slightly since 2021. This may be due to the sector continually adapting to hybrid ways of working.
